

Home »

The Best Lesbian/Bi Movie Poll: Winners!

Posted by AfterEllen.com Staff on November 19, 2012

Tweet Like 18

1. Imagine Me & You (2005)

Starring: Piper Perabo, Lena Headey Director: Ol Parker

Having already solidified herself as a lesbian favorite from Lost & Delirious, Piper Perabo starred in this romantic comedy with a delightful lesbian twist. Interestingly enough, the film was first written to be straight-forwardly straight, which Piper's Rachel leaving her new husband for another man. But when that felt too conventional, the script changed and Lena Headey was given the pivotal part as a ginger-haired flower shop owner that wooed Rachel's heart, even on her wedding day. With a sweet soundtrack and feel-good ending, it's clear that AfterEllen.com readers prefer a lesbian love story that has a happily-ever-after.

Our review of "Imagine Me & You"

2. I Can't Think Straight (2008)

RECENT COMMENTS

Hmmm...

Posted by SterlingMB

About: Morning Brew - Tues. Nov. 20: Gia's ex-girlfriend remembers her, a new lesbian rom com in the works (8)

Don't Lose Hope

Posted by Ravyn

About: "Chicago Fire" recap \(1.6\) "Is your sister around?" (5)

Control

Posted by I.encourage.the.impossible

About: Pop Theory: Using People \(as Things\) \(1\)

Yum :)

Posted by erin

About: Casey Legler: Our new favorite woman working as a male model \(4\)

Gah

Posted by Ms Mae

About: "Lost Girl" teases with a trailer and our first Dr. Hotpants sighting \(10\)

FIND US ON FACEBOOK

Create an account or log in to see what your friends like.

AfterEllen.com on Facebook

Like 20,325

Starring: Lisa Ray, Sheetel Sheth Director: Shamim Sarif

Written and directed by an out lesbian, this film was one of the first and best depictions of two Middle Eastern women from different backgrounds falling for one another. The follow-up to Sarif's The World Unseen had all kinds of conflicts happening for the women at its center, but never lost its way. It also made lesbian icons of the actresses, and Sheth will reprise her role as Leyla in the upcoming web adaptation.

Our review of "I Can't Think Straight"

3. Kiss Me/Kyss Mig (2011)

Starring: Ruth Vega Fernandez, Liv Mjones Director: Alexandra-Therese Keining

It's interesting to see how high a film released in the last year can rank so high on the list of Best Lesbian/Bi Films Ever, but it's no surprise that it was Kiss Me. The Swedish film about step-sisters-to-be who find themselves with an unexpected attraction is well-written, beautifully-shot and incredibly acted. It's based on similar circumstances from the writer-director's real life, which gives it an added element of lesbian appeal.

Our review of Kiss Me

4. Elena Undone (2010)

Starring: Rebecka Liljeberg, Alexandra Dahlström Director: Lukas Moodysson

In this Swedish coming-of-age story, a young lesbian with no friends and depressing life in a rundown town has a crush on a beautiful popular girl at her school. What starts as unrequited love ends in their being outed as a couple, but a vague yet positive conclusion kept us happily believing Elin and Agnes could make it through anything. A teen movie that is without cheesiness or cliched coming out moments, Show Me Love was lauded as a must-see film by straight and gay film festivals alike, including the British Film Institute, the Berlin Film Festival and GLAAD Awards.

Our review of "Show Me Love"

17. The World Unseen (2007)

Starring: Lisa Rey, Sheetal Sheth, Parvin Dabas Director: Shamim Sarif

Adapted from her own novel of the same name, Shamim Sarif wrote and directed this historical romance about two Indian South African who fall in love during Apartheid. Lisa Rey and Sheetal Sheth also starred in Sarif's I Can't Think Straight, which came in at #2 on our list.

Our review of "The World Unseen"

18. When Night is Falling (1995)